Many notation programs use a virtual keyboard for the input of the notes on the staff.

1. First choose a value by clicking on the button.
2. Then click on the piano lay-out for the note.
3. The preferred note will appear on the staff.

Examples

NS notes (= normal script notes)

The instrument produces different tones on push and on pull. This is indicated in the way that a long line under the notes is added. Passages with underline are played in push direction, passages without underline are played in pull direction. It shows the musician which buttons he has to play. This has the advantage that when I can play some song on a certain Steyrian, I can play that same song on any other Steyrian no matter which Chord it has.
